Wrested Victory From Harvard in the Annual Four-Mile Event.

BECOMES FAMOUS

The Last Mile of the Race Was a Fight Never to Be Forgotten.

NEW LONDON, CONN., June 29 .- The Yale 'varsity crew this afternoon wrested victory from Harvard in the annual fourmile race on the Thames by the length with the shells lapping and the gracefu prows zig-zagging between strokes, the Yale boat crossed the finish line threequarters of a length ahead of the crimson. Yale won by two and one-half seconds. The Blues' time was 22:33 1-2; Har vard's was 22:36.

Such a race has never before been rowed in the twenty-seven years of racing between those old rivals. The Elis went to the starting flags confident of an to the starting Hags confident of an easy victory, but Coach Wray spring a surprise on Yale, and to-night his name is on the lips of every lover of rowing as the coming rival of John Kennedy, the professional coach at New Haven.

An Unknown Coach. Wray came to the Thames three weeks ago an unknown coach. He will go back to Boston as the first professional who has inspired absolute confidence in Harvard. The race was scheduled to be rowed at half-past 4 o'clock, and was most cloudless sky, as perfect a day as could be wished for, the two big eights trained to the top notch of condition, all combined to form a picture which thrilled the thousands of spectators and inspired Yale's Best Start.

Yale got the best of the start, and rowing a 34 in the first half dozen strokes shot the nose of her shell ahead. Just before the first half mile was finished Harvard having started at 32, ran her

Harvard having started at 32, ran her stroke up to 35, and began to cut down Yale's lead.

The crews now began to strike the ships' channel just before the navy yard, and Yale got the benefit of the fastest water. Yale gained on this half mile just three seconds, or almost a boat's length, and at the two-mile flag off the new yard had the greatest lead over navy yard had the greatest lead over Harvard which she had at any time dur-

The last mile of the race was a light never to be forgotien by those fortunate enough, to witness it. Just beyond the three-mile flag, Meler, Harvard s No. 7, who had been rowing a terrifle race, seemed to have pumped himself out. He was suffering torture, and it looked as though he could not possibly hold his form the rest of the distance. The Harvard stroke dropped back to 31 a minute, but it only stayed there for a very brief space of time.

Shells Again Lapped.
Suddenly Meier seemed to get his se-Suddenly Meier seemed to get his socond wind, and the Crimson stroke went up two points. The Hervard shell began to gain on Yale. On every stroke the Harvard shell crept up nearer and nearer the Yale beat. Suddenly the shells were once more lapped. The Yale coxswain called for a spurt, and his crew raised their stroke to 34, the highest that they had been taught to row. Still Harvard was game. Up went the Harvard stroke to 34, and over the last quarter of a nile, the prow of Cambridge shell began to gain inch by inch on the stern of the Blues boat. The crews were only a hundred yards from the finish, and still it was either's race. The crowd became wild with excitement. The Harvard shell continued to creep up on the Yale boat and every

Meier Falls Senseless.

Meier Falls Senseless.

Harvard's men danced and hugged each other as though they had won the race. As Harvard passed the finish line Meier at No. 7, dropped his oar and slid down into the bottom of the shell. A few handfuls of water brought him to his senses and then the two eights rowed off to their boat houses. The Crimson received just as much applause as the Blue. The race was rowed with just one unpleasant incident. The steam yacht Mermald, owned by William Ross Proctor, of New York, insisted on following the race from start to finish against the repeated orders of Chairman Schweppe of the regetta committee. Yale and Harvard for years have been trying to put an end to this interference and Chairman Schweppe took drastic measures to make an example of the Mermaid.

two races of the day, these being the varsity four-oared and the freshman eight. Both crews rowed magnificently and Harvard had to use every ounce of her power and bring into play every muscle that her men had trained for this particular test of speed.

The 'varsity four-oared race of two miles went to Harvard by what is officially declared to be a length, and the freshmen race went to the same crew by an official length and three quarters. The official time was as follows:
